PRIZMPROM A SUCCESS!

HAVEN, the Youth Group for Teens who identify as Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender, Questioning, & Allies, hosted the Prizm Prom on Sunday, May 22 at the Historic Hotel Bethlehem. Youth between the ages of 14-20 came from near & far to enjoy a dazzling night of dancing and fun.

HAVEN facilitators along with volunteers from Interweave, Renaissance, & GLOW served as chaperones. American Hairlines & PopMart donated decor including a lit-up, spinning mannequin wearing a rainbow gown & dubbed the "Prom Fairy Godmother." Elysium Fields donated fabulous floral centerpieces. (Full list of sponsors: www.prizmprom.com.)

But the real show was the youth arriving in everything from urban hip-hop to goth to tuxes & gowns. Allen's GSA helped out by making a rainbow balloon arch & rainbow keepsake candles. One student designed gorgeous scepters which were awarded to the Prom King & Queen and the Prom Drag King & Queen. A good time was had by all.

What's That About?

Readers write or email
"What's That About?"
editor Liz Bradbury with questions about GLBT issues.

Dear WTA, Recently a friend asked me why GLBT activists are so against Abstinence Programs in sex education classes. Frankly, I had a hard time answering, I do happen to think that youth, including gay youth, are safer if they abstain from sex. How could anyone not agree with that? Signed, Just Say No.

Dear JSN, Before you endorse abstinence education programs, know more about them. So far, about 60 percent of the young people who signed the program's 'abstinence pledges' had broken them within a year. Half of the remainder, when quizzed, admitted to having oral sex, and half the entire group thought oral sex did not amount to breaking the pledge. Not only do 'virginity pledges' not work, in many cases they are actually harmful because those who sign them are less likely to use condoms or other contraceptives once they do start to have sex. These programs include a provision that no student should be told about condoms in any way, unless it is a discussion as to how they fail. There is no safer sex or birth control information for youth at all.

GLBT activists want our youth to have honest full information as to how to protect themselves. But GLBT community youth are left completely out of Abstinence Programs. They are told not to have sex until marriage, but they know that it is against the law for same-sex couples to marry in the US. They are not educated about their own sexuality, and in many public education programs, it is mandated that no mention of same sex relations is allowed. Even the vaguest answers to direct questions are forbidden.

There is good data that shows comprehensive sex education, that includes accurate information about safe sex -with abstinence information included- works, and works well. Let's be sure our youth are given all the information they need, not just moralistic opinions that ignore reality.

RAGS TO RICHES TAKE THE FIRST STEP

by Denise McKelvey

Dear Denise, My partner and our extended families' health care issues are completely stressing us out. We want to plan for our own health care and long-term care to not be a burden on our children. What should we consider? Signed, Health Care Blues

Dear Blues, Let's start with HEALTH CARE -- Some questions you need to ask yourself: Do you have adequate health insurance? Are you familiar with what is and is not covered? Would you and your partner be willing to have an insurance professional, a financial planner or an eldercare attorney review your coverage to be sure it is sufficient? Have you purchased or considered a "medigap" policy to help cover expenses not covered by Medicare (Medicare is the government-provided health-care program for the elderly)? Have you thought about whether you have enough savings to cover a major medical expense? Who should make health decisions for you should you become incapacitated? Do you have a durable power of attorney for health care that names a partner, child or friend to make these decisions?

LONG TERM CARE -- What are your plans should you need long-term health care at home or in a nursing home? (Medicare does not cover most custodial care, whether in a nursing home or in your own home). Do you have long-term care insurance or have you considered buying such a policy? Would you expect to tap your savings to pay for long-term care? Are you comfortable spending virtually all your assets to qualify for state provided benefits through Medicaid? (Medicaid is a health program designed for the poor).

Would you expect your partner or children to provide some or all of your care in a health crisis? For how long? Do you expect to eventually move in with one or more of your children? Have you discussed this with them?

IN AN EMERGENCY -- Does your partner or one of your children have a complete list of your emergency contracts, including the names of doctors, financial advisors, attorneys, pharmacists, relatives and close friends? Does your partner or children have duplicate keys for your home, cars and safe-deposit box?

How would bills be paid and financial matters handled should you suddenly become incapacitated? (Creating a durable power of attorney for your finances, and adding someone as a second signature on your financial accounts, can help others take over for you if necessary). Have you made up a list of your important papers and where they are located?

These are the first steps in planning for your current and future health care needs. Next month: Assets and Estate Planning.

RANTS & RAVES BY STEPHEN T. LIBBY

BETTER Is it only gay people who are decent role models for our kids these days? I mean Ellen DeGeneres just won two emmys for her hilarious family friendly talk show. Carson Kressley is on a "PG" rated show that my niece and nephew love. Melissa Etheridge is battling with CA and is sounding better than ever. Elton John is marrying longtime partner David Furnish in December. In recent years a gaggle of gay entertainers have won Oscar, Tony and Grammy. Marc Cherry wrote the year's biggest TV hit, Desperate Housewives (which gave us a gay teen kiss!) Rupaul is introducing a doll in her likeness (Ru-doll?) k.d. lang still has the best voice in music. And Rosie O'Donnell, well, there's always next year for Rosie. On average we are spiritual beings who care about the struggles of others and believe that if there is a God (s)he wouldn't adhere to religious dogma, but love all beings equally and be saddened by the wars waged and rights denied in her/his name. ...We also throw one hell of a party.

Meanwhile, let's take a gander at some straight celebs. Tom Cruise went off his rocker and onto the furniture on Oprah, who by the way keeps telling people they should change, change, change. Just because she found her size 6 body doesn't mean everyone wants to. Paris, Nicole, Lindsay and Jessica are all skin and bones. Britney is so trailer trash she may be real. As much as I love her music, Gwen Stefani's disc isn't much for young girls to listen to (and she dresses like the millennium's version of Cyndi Lauper). Apparently cheating is okay if you're beautiful (Brad Pitt & Angelina Jolie). And marriage is not to be entered into seriously (oh, jeez take your pick of recently separated or divorced stars). Which Bennifer is pregnant? Exactly how many Colin Farrell Jr's are running around out there in this unsuspecting world? Do we even have to discuss Courtney Love raising poor little Francis Bean? On average, the hets who are getting press are either acting like heathens or deities. The Bush administration truly believes it speaks for the Catholic Almighty (the only almighty). I do admit to liking the twinkle in Laura Bush's eye. That's a Bush I wouldn't mind having for dinner.

Let's do the math. 100 points for the gays (totally random, like their choices usually are-Hello Ohio!) 25 points for the non-gays (totally based on my own opinion and nothing scientific-hey, it works for the Supreme Court). 100 vs. 25. The only reasonable conclusion I can come to is that Gay people are better. Okay, Okay. Maybe "better" isn't the right word. No, wait, yes it is. We are finally better. We have been denied, discriminated against, harassed, mauled (that part I liked), beaten, tortured and murdered throughout history and still are today, all over the world. But we are better for those who have come before us. The men, women and trans people who have lived and died because they were (perceived) different. While you're partying at the local Pride fest, remember those individuals who have helped make this a better life for you and me. And the next time you vote, remember those who still make this a struggle and screw them out of office. 3 1/2 years. Sigh. Happy Pride. Have a Cosmo for me!!!!!! Smooches, Steve

PROUD PARENTS

There is no better time to talk about being proud gay parents than during Gay Pride season. We are full of pride... "gay dad pride".

Some may wonder what gay pride is all about. To us it's all about being gay, being out, and living our life to its fullest, attaining our goals and pursuing our dreams. Isn't the pursuit of happiness one of our constitutional rights? Our happiness is found right within our family, our immediate family as well as our extended family.

Growing up we never would have thought we would create the family we have now. We never thought it would be possible to be this happy and this proud being gay. But it is.

Coming out to our families and friends was the best thing we could have done. Although it was scary to disclose such a very personal piece of information, that our families and friends already probably suspected, it was the most important step we could make in securing their support. Coming out allowed us to begin to pursue our dreams. One dream was to become parents. As gay males, that dream was possible through adoption. Once we began the process of adopting our son, we were required to go through a home study, making it crucial to be out to the adoption agency as well, especially since we planned on having an open adoption. References were needed from non-family members. The cooperation of family members was needed in the presentation of a pictorial biography.

We had to market ourselves with a focus on our family life as the selling point. We apparently did a very good job, (many thanks to our family and friends) as we were selected by a birth mother to raise her newborn son. When we asked her why she chose a gay male couple, she told us she just felt in her heart that we were the right ones and that she would be happy for her son to have two fathers. She did not make her choice based on our sexual orientation. Apparently, she could see that had as much impact on our potential as parents as our hair color. Maybe it was our honesty, along with our desire to be parents that touched her. Or maybe it was all the positive input she received from our family and friends, who were as anxious as we were to welcome Lucas into the family.

Being proud got us this far and continues to strengthen our family. Our son gets to enjoy gatherings with immediate and extended family, public outings, church services, swimming lessons, dining out, visits with his godparents and grandparents, walks in the neighborhood, playtime with other children, and quality time at home with his dads, who just want to give him all the love they can. Being proud gay men helped us adopt our son. Being proud gay parents is allowing us to give our son the best we can.

INTERWEAVE RETREAT A HUGE SUCCESS

Interweave hosted an amazing 1-day Retreat on May 7 at UUCLV, with people coming from all over PA & beyond. Several came to learn how to start GLBT youth groups in their area. There were local city employees & health care workers, as well as ordinary folk who were looking to expand their diversity knowledge. Others came to learn how to protect their families. Some were simply interested in connecting with others or their own spirituality. Some great spiritual discussions came about with future events being planned as a result of the discussion that was started. There was inspiring rhythm & drumming, & some great food on top of that! Many thanks to all who attended, volunteered, cooked, cleaned, & presented!

SCOTT SAYS

By Scott Laubner

LOVE & THE DEWEY DECIMAL SYSTEM

Cora the Co-Worker and I were talking over lunch and I say, "I'm looking for a romance." She says, "Go to the library, they sell 'em there ten for two dollars." Not exactly what I meant but I thought what the heck, I'll check it out. I approached the reference desk.

"May I help you?" asked Marian the Librarian.

"Yes, do you know where I can find hot guys?"

Pedantically she said, "Hot Guys? Do you know the author or the call number?"

Realizing I wasn't getting anywhere I thought I'd scout out this place myself. Periodicals, audiovisuals, microfiche; where do guys hang out?

I followed a promising looking guy into the stacks. He looked at some gourmet cooking books and then some books on international travel, but then he checked out the autobiography of Pope John Paul II and I figured we don't play on the same team so. I moved on to another dude perusing the aisles. He spent half an hour in the Broadway musical CDs and then looked at some "How to" books from the mixology/cocktails section but then finally checked out some books on Keynesian Economics. While not necessarily a straight subject, definitely a tedious one, so I moved on. A third guy looked at gardening and interior design and I thought I finally found a real lead but then he turned his attention to a book on drag racing. I looked over his shoulder expecting to see pictures of Sylvia Silverberg, Kitty Mame Dietrich and Pearl E. Gates in track suits but it was something completely different. I figured are we not only not sitting in the same pew, we don't even go to the same church.

I went to the library looking for a guy with some wood, but all I found was a newspaper on a stick. So Mr Right if you're out there, my love life is way overdue and at fifteen cents a day, it starts to add up.

Happy Pride Day Chipmunk Readers!!

Muhlenberg Summer Music Theatre presents CANDIDE, July 13 * 31, Empie Theatre, Baker Center for the Arts, Muhlenberg College. 484-664-3333. The brilliance of Leonard Bernstein's musical score is a perfect match for the genius of Voltaire's iconic philosophy. DON'T FORGET THE SPECIAL 131 STATE REPRESENTATIVE DISTRICT ELECTION - JULY 19 GLBT VOTES COULD DECIDE IT

LIZ OUT LOUD

BE HONEST, By Liz Bradbury

...ABE?

A new scholarly work titled The Intimate Life of Abraham Lincoln, has spawned reviews in every major publication with titles like, "Was Lincoln Gay?" I haven't read the book, but I'd like to. (Trish: Holiday Gift Suggestion). Articles indicate that it's a careful and minute consideration of every period piece of writing by and about Lincoln. Numerous facts, that scholars confirm, underscore Lincoln's gay sexual orientation:

1. Pro: Lincoln slept in the same bed with Joshua Speed for four years (yes, you read that right, they slept in the same bed, even though they could afford larger quarters). 2. Pro: He had an emotional breakdown when Speed left town. 3. Pro: There was also Capt. David Derickson who, in Mrs. Lincoln's absence, frequently slept with Abe in the same bed at the summer White House. 4. Pro: Lincoln had a shaky relationship with his wife Mary Todd, she proposed.

The far right's arguments against Lincoln being gay, or at least being bisexual are: 1. Con: The word gay wasn't used in those days. (But remember, Walt Whitman was writing gay poetry during Lincoln's lifetime. Walt's on our team, no one disputes that.) 2. Con: If Lincoln was really gay he wouldn't have been as honest as he was about sleeping in the same bed with Speed. (Um, we are talking "Honest Abe" here.) 3. Con: And perhaps the best provable argument against: He did have children with his wife. (Although there are plenty of gay and bisexual fathers in the world).

Admitting and teaching about Lincoln's sexual orientation is not revisionist history. Way back in 1920, Lincoln historian Carl Sandburg likened Abe to "a streak of lavender, and spots soft as May violets." In fact, it is revisionist history to ignore and strike from history books the intimate same-sex relationships of Lincoln's life.

Does it matter if Lincoln was gay? Yes it does!!! Wouldn't a young oppressed gay student, taunted in middle school by intolerant bullies, feel more than a little boost to his or her self-esteem by learning that the person many consider the greatest historical figure in American History, was queer? Abraham Lincoln, as a gay role model for gay youth? Yes, that matters. Let's teach our children that one of the greatest figures in history, was part of our community and let's let the pride of that, and all our other GLBT heroes course through our souls.

Quote by Henry Whitney speaking to William Herndon in 1865 -- "I have heard [Lincoln] say over and over again about sexual contact: 'It is a harp of a thousand strings.'" than full legal recognition? When they are ready, they should have the right to marry, to support each other with employment benefits, to make medical and financial decisions for each other, and to automatically inherit from each other's estate. There are places in the US and Canada that can give them all or some of those rights. But not Pennsylvania, not now anyway. There may be other reasons why they may ultimately choose to move back to Pennsylvania; jobs, friends, family. But as a state, the draconian policies of PA are stacked to cause these women to slip away to another place that welcomes them. It is the State's loss, and our community's loss as well.

7 TRISH'S COLUMN

WE WILL MISS YOU

BY TRISH & LIZ By Patricia Sullivan

We are friends with a young lesbian couple who graduated from Muhlenberg College a few years ago. Both are bright, creative and ambitious. More importantly, they each have an incredible social conscience and the results of their work locally have made a real difference in the lives of people in need. They are not only fun to talk to and spend time with, they give us hope for the future.

Sadly for us, they will be leaving Pennsylvania soon. The one who has been working for a couple of years creating programming that supports diversity and helps deter bullying in local schools, will be entering a Ph.D. program at Vanderbilt University, where she will be fully funded for 5 years by a Javits Scholarship to study lesbian poetry and queer theory. Her partner, who is just finishing a Community Fellows Master's degree at Lehigh, and who has been working on development for a community not-for-profit that provides inner city services, has networked a couple of significant employment opportunities in Nashville, near Vanderbilt, so they can be together and she can continue her career. She will undoubtedly pursue her Ph.D. in the future as well.

We will be sad to see them leave. But while we will hope that after they finish their studies in Tennessee, they might return to the Lehigh Valley, we also must look at the state of Pennsylvania objectively for the futures of two young lesbians for whom we care deeply. Though the Lehigh Valley social climate is generally good for GLBT people (certainly better than your average red state), Pennsylvania not only does not support any legal recognition of same-sex relationships, it doesn't even have state-wide anti-discrimination protection for employment and housing. It's more than likely an effort to pass a State Constitutional Amendment banning civil unions and marriage for same-sex couples will come up in Harrisburg in the next two years and there are legislators who are trying to overturn the State's second parent adoption ruling.

The fact that the city of Allentown has one of the most progressive anti-discrimination laws in the United States is not enough. When these young women finish their advanced degrees, they will be able to get jobs anywhere they want to live. They will be sought after by cutting edge employers, in the same way Vanderbilt University worked to encourage them to come there. They will be the ones to choose. Why would they choose to live and work in a state that denies their family equal civil rights? We feel about these young women, as though they were our daughters. How could any parent want less for their children

Brain drain: A State's loss of the creative class, particularly highly educated young adults.

According to the "Brookings Report," PA ranks 2nd among states for citizens over 65, 9th in the largest percentage loss of young people aged 25-34 and had the 5th largest out of the state migration of residents of any state in the country. Only 22.4% of Pennsylvanians possess a bachelor's degree. PA ranks 30th nationwide on this key indicator. Interestingly the Brookings Report cites sprawl and urban decline as a factor "hindering the state's ability to create the kinds of places that attract critical 'human capital' and reverse a 'brain drain.'" But economist Richard Florida author of "The Rise of the Creative Class" has said that regions, companies, and countries that are open, inclusive, and tolerant are economic powerhouses. He goes on to say that "the presence of a large and vibrant gay population is an extremely strong indicator that a region is open, inclusive, or tolerant." To put it in the framework of Sullivan's three T's of economic development: Tolerance helps to attract talent, which helps to create technology."

The "brain drain" in Pennsylvania it is in the legislature. They are operating on so few of the "little gray cells" that they are unable to grasp the need to legislate civil rights for GLBT citizens.

QUOTE #1

"Either this guy believes his party is not serious and is totally Machiavellian in its position [on gay rights] or you know, as David Brock said in his great book 'Blinded by the Right,' there's some sort of self-loathing or something."
-- Bill Clinton after key far-right Republican political consultant Arthur Finkelstein married his boyfriend in Massachusetts. Finkelstein has worked to elect a host of very anti-gay Republicans, including Jesse Helms.

QUOTE #2

"Describing sexual orientation as an 'alternative lifestyle' is highly politicized, outdated, and inaccurate language that can alienate LGBT youth at a time when they are particularly vulnerable. By terming sexual orientation a 'lifestyle,' HHS is discussing it as a matter of choice, which is contrary to the vast majority of scientific evidence. Sexual orientation is not a lifestyle."
-- HRC on inappropriate language on the US Health and Human Services Web Site

QUOTE #3

"It might not feel this way, but we are winning. The constitutional amendments [banning same-sex marriage] are an act of desperation. We are winning the discussion, and they know it. They are using brute power to keep the discrimination around, to enshrine it for a generation. If we do not give up, they will not have the last word."
-- Freedom to Marry Executive Director Evan Wolfson to the Michigan gay newspaper Between The Lines.
